12. Financial instruments carried at fair value

A financial instrument is regarded as quoted in an active market if quoted prices are readily available from an exchange, industry group, pricing service or regulatory agency, and those prices represent actual and regularly occurring market transactions on an arm's-length basis. The appropriate quoted market price for an asset held or a liability to be issued is usually the current bid price and, for an asset to be acquired or a liability held, the asking price.

The existence of published price quotations in an active market is the best evidence of fair value and, where they exist, they are used to measure the financial asset or financial liability. A market is considered to be active if transactions occur with sufficient volume and frequency to provide pricing information on an ongoing basis. Financial instruments fair valued using quoted prices would generally be classified as level 1 in terms of the fair value hierarchy and when fair valued indirectly (i.e. derived from prices) will be classified as level 2.

Inputs typically used in valuation techniques for loans and advances, other investments, investments in associates and other financial liabilities include discount rates, expected future cash flows, dividend yields, earnings multiples, volatility, equity prices and commodity prices.

information about the estimates and assumptions that market participants would use in setting a price for the financial instrument.

Valuation techniques applied by the group would result in financial instruments being classified as level 2 or level 3 in terms of the fair value hierarchy. The determination of whether a financial instrument is classified as level 2 or level 3 is dependent on the significance of observable inputs versus unobservable inputs in relation to the fair value of the financial instrument.

Valuation methodologies and techniques applied for level 3 financial instruments include a combination of discounted cash flow analysis, application of earnings multiples on sustainable after-tax earnings and/or current and projected net asset values to determine overall reasonability. The valuation technique applied to specific financial instruments depends on the nature of the financial instrument and the most appropriate valuation technique is determined on that basis.

After the valuations of the unlisted financial assets and liabilities are performed, these are presented to the group's investment committee for independent review. All significant valuations are approved by the investment committee.

The valuation methodologies, techniques and inputs applied to the fair value measurement of the financial instruments have been applied in a manner consistent with that of the previous financial period.

15. Going concern

The condensed consolidated financial statements have been prepared on a going concern basis. The board undertook processes to ensure that the going-concern principle applies, which include:

- the group's financial budgets and a 12-month rolling cash flow forecast;
- the performance of underlying business operations and their ability to make a positive contribution to the group's objectives;
- the capital structure, liabilities and quality of the assets underpinning the statement of financial position; and
- the banking facilities and the group's assets to ensure that these are sufficient to fund imminent liabilities and meet the group's working capital requirements.

The board is of the view that, based on its knowledge of the group, assumptions regarding the outcome of the key processes underway and specific inquiries it has made, the group has adequate resources at their disposal to settle obligations as they fall due and the group will continue as going concern for the foreseeable future.

Overview and prospects

Sluggish and below par domestic and global economic growth implied generally challenging business conditions over the course of the reporting period. Business confidence was further eroded by perceived risk escalation as geopolitical tension increased amidst the wars in Ukraine and the Middle East. In addition, increased policy uncertainty because of national elections in many countries including South Africa, added to the risk of business decisions. Moreover, prevailing interest rates near or at a cyclical peak-levels further dampened demand, as monetary authorities maintained a tight policy stance in the battle against a resurgence in inflation in the aftermath of post-Covid stimulation.

Despite domestic inflation dipping marginally below the upper limit of target band at the beginning of the reporting period, the continued vulnerability of the Rand and the de facto targeting of the middle of the target band at 4.5% (rather than the 3-6% band) resulted in the South African Reserve Bank maintaining a very "tight" monetary stance throughout. The restrictive effects of maintaining the domestic prime interest rate at its recent peak of 11.75% and at the highest real- level in more than fifteen years, inevitably further inhibited the tentative cyclical economic recovery.

Some green shoots pointing at improved conditions became evident, though. Most notably, the ending of loadshedding by the end of March was a significant positive step in reviving business confidence, while continued moderation in inflation amidst declining global oil prices, bolstered the hope for interest rate relief. As the US Federal Reserve signaled towards the end of the reporting period that it was about to commence its rate cutting cycle, market sentiment was buoyed as the US Dollar started to weaken. Consequently, emerging market currencies like the Rand found some traction in strengthening against the Dollar. The Rand was further bolstered by improved confidence following the establishment of the Government of National Unity post the national elections and by an initial more "business-friendly" policy stance, gaining about 7% against the US Dollar over the course of the reporting period. That facilitated further moderation in domestic inflation, easing to 4.4%, marginally below the mid-point of the target band.

Domestic financial markets recovered well off oversold levels, rendering handsome double-digit annualized returns by the major domestic asset classes over the reporting period. While business conditions concomitantly improved for Vunani Limited's underlying businesses being predominantly in the financial sector, more tangible favourable results of a recovery in underlying business conditions should only be evident over the course of the next few quarters as the interest rate cutting cycle progresses

Vunani's performance for the period ended 31 August 2024 was down in comparison to the prior year. The group generated total comprehensive income for the period of R22.5 million (2023: R35.9 million), while total profit attributable to equity holders of the company amounted to R10.8 million (2023: R28.9 million).
